

GIANT MAN (Hank Pym)

CHARACTER DESCRIPTION:

Hank Pym has always had a chip on his shoulder. Though his talent as a scientist has opened many doors, his unpleasant personality quickly slams them shut. He's grouches, complains, and generally feels owed. By whom and for what, he probably doesn't even know himself.

Hank married Janet Van Dyne, a diminutive woman who has the unique ability to shrink in size and sprout insect wings. She becomes known as Wasp, and together they build Pym Industries. It's an under-funded, low-rent facility, always on the brink of either disaster or discovery. Hank is smart, but not brilliant, and can't quite make a go of it. He chafes at anyone who dares offer him advice, and has no patience with those who disagree with him. This stubbornness not only threatens his work, but it puts a great strain on his marriage.

So when Hank was up for the coveted government job as the head of the Super-Soldier Program at SHIELD, he knew he'd get it, and Janet was eager for her husband to finally get the respect she felt he deserved. But Nick Fury offered the position to Bruce Banner instead. Feeling betrayed, Hank became driven to accomplish some amazing things on his own – just to rub them in Fury's face. As if to force people to look up to him, Hank developed a way to grow himself at will to 60 feet.

Finally, Hank becomes of use to Nick Fury. Not as a scientist, but as a superhero, because Giant Man will make a stalwart member of the defensive team Fury is assembling. The problem is - Hank's overblown sense of entitlement remains as big as his stature. And the way he sees it? There's no way he's going to take orders from an antique war hero like Captain America.

SAMPLE DIALOGUE

Smug:

HANK

Nah, I'm not holding a grudge. I look at it this way - you got what you deserved when you hired Banner over me. Speaking of which, cracked that serum, yet?

Self righteous:

HANK

Yeah, Fury'll still be barkin' orders after some Chitauri rips his head off. And if something DOES pop, we'll deal with it on our own. You know? I mean, who needs Shield? Let Captain American toe the company line!

Angry and spiteful:

HANK

Don't patronize me, Jan! Why do you always do that when you know it drives me nuts! And I gotta wonder, do you think he'd still find you attractive if he saw you seasoning your rice with caterpillars and beetles?

Remorseful:

HANK

Janet, please... don't hang up. I want you to know that I'm... I'm very sorry. You were right, I acted like a jealous and resentful jerk, and I want to change. I will change. For you. Just... don't give up on me. Please?
